

A-level
HISTORY

Component 1B Spain in the Age of Discovery, 1469–1598

7042/1B

Wednesday 6 June 2018

Afternoon

Time allowed: 2 hours 30 minutes

For this paper you must have:

- an AQA 16-page answer book.

[Turn over]

BLANK PAGE

INSTRUCTIONS

- Use black ink or black ball-point pen.
- Write the information required on the front of your answer book. The PAPER REFERENCE is 7042/1B.
- Answer THREE questions.
In SECTION A answer Question 01.
In SECTION B answer TWO questions.

INFORMATION

- The marks for questions are shown in brackets.
- The maximum mark for this paper is 80.
- You will be marked on your ability to:
  - use good English
  - organise information clearly
  - use specialist vocabulary where appropriate.

ADVICE

- You are advised to spend about:
  - 60 minutes on Question 01
  - 45 minutes on each of the other questions answered.

DO NOT TURN OVER UNTIL TOLD TO DO SO

SECTION A*Answer Question 01.*EXTRACT A

Philip II was the perfect master in the art of ruling. He sought to prevent the Crown becoming the tool of the powerful factions. He was capable, like any self-respecting monarch, of direct intervention. He had Baron de Montigny, the envoy of the rebel Dutch leaders, Egmont and Hornes, secretly executed in October 1570 in the castle of Simancas. Philip II decided it was better to strangle him quietly to avoid further unrest which his execution might provoke, as the public executions of Egmont and Hornes would do. Philip wrote: "Everyone must believe he had died of illness and this must be given out by letters". This kind of mentality Philip shared with other monarchs of the time. One of the features of his character was a high sense of justice; he believed that his sovereignty gave him the right to execute private and secret justice beyond any authority except God's.

5
10
15

Adapted from John Lynch, Spain 1516–1598.
From Nation State to World Empire, 1994

EXTRACT B

Philip exercised a good deal less than total control. Theoretically his power was unlimited. Yet, despite the image of an absolute king resisting factions led by the Prince of Eboli and the Duke of Alba, Philip did nothing but, at best, approve plans already made. Equally both indecisive and timid, he was responsible for decisions with disastrous consequences: Alba's policies in the Netherlands, the plans chosen for the Armada and the orders given to Parma which, when on the verge of victory, left him stripped of his armies. In Spain, effective government rested on the co-operation of local nobles, town guilds and traditional landowners. Philip, far from ruling directly, saw the Crown's resources so strained that its centralist policies collapsed, with power passing to the local regional governments. Philip struggled to rule the many kingdoms of the peninsula. He was often forced to accept conditions, such as respecting traditional rights in Aragon and Portugal. In Valencia just 73 out of 300 towns were under royal control.

5

10

15

20

Adapted from Geoffrey Woodward, Philip II, 1999

[Turn over]

EXTRACT C

As Spain's papal nuncio complained in 1587, "His Majesty wants to see and do everything himself; but that is impossible, even if he had ten hands and heads". Religious faith played an important part in preventing Philip from achieving his goals. Equally, he was unable to distinguish between those affairs that he should deal with himself and those he could not avoid delegating to others. This combination undermined Philip's ability to deal with the many problems that confronted the ruler of fifty million subjects in a global monarchy, almost constantly at war. The attempted micro-management of the empire defined the nature of Philip's rule. No one could excel in both minutely overseeing the construction of the Escorial Palace and additionally be a world statesman. The very skill sets that equipped Philip so superbly for the first task fatally compromised his ability to succeed at the second, as ruler of a global empire.

Adapted from Geoffrey Parker, Imprudent King: A New Life of Philip II, 2014

0	1
---	---

Using your understanding of the historical context, assess how convincing the arguments in these three extracts are in relation to Philip II as a ruler. [30 marks]

[Turn over]

BLANK PAGE

SECTION B

Answer TWO questions.

0 2 'Ferdinand and Isabella failed to deal effectively with domestic challenges to the Spanish Crown.'

Assess the validity of this view of the years 1474 to 1504. [25 marks]

0 3 'Religious dissent was never a serious threat to the Catholic Church in Spain.'

Assess the validity of this view in the years 1517 to 1556. [25 marks]

0 4 To what extent was the conquest of Portugal beneficial to Spain in the years 1578 to 1598?
[25 marks]

END OF QUESTIONS

There are no questions printed on this page

Copyright information

For confidentiality purposes, from the November 2015 examination series, acknowledgements of third party copyright material will be published in a separate booklet rather than including them on the examination paper or support materials. This booklet is published after each examination series and is available for free download from www.aqa.org.uk after the live examination series.

Permission to reproduce all copyright material has been applied for. In some cases, efforts to contact copyright-holders may have been unsuccessful and AQA will be happy to rectify any omissions of acknowledgements. If you have any queries please contact the Copyright Team, AQA, Stag Hill House, Guildford, GU2 7XJ.

Copyright © 2018 AQA and its licensors. All rights reserved.

IB/M/Jun18/JW/7042/1B/E1

